

Should the Polluter Pay?

Panel to include

Steve Hynes, Director, Legal Action Group
Richard Miller, Head of Legal Aid, The Law Society
Caroline Slocock, CEO, Refugee & Migrant Justice
Phil Jew, Head of Policy, Advice UK
(+ public body representative, TBC)

When legal aid cases occur as a result of failings or incorrect decisions made by public bodies, should the responsible body reimburse the cost to the legal aid fund? Following on from the recent LawWorks question time debate, the Access to Justice Foundation invites you to a panel discussion on this issue.

The panellists, with audience participation, will discuss the “polluter pays” principle, and the innovative schemes in Solihull and Nottingham that seek to improve efficiency through the advice sector and public bodies working more closely together. Questions and comments from the audience will be welcomed.

Monday 10th May 2010, 6.30pm
Drinks reception to follow

Venue: The Law Society, 113 Chancery Lane, London WC2A 1PL

To reserve a space, please email your details to events@atjf.org.uk

The Panel will follow the Foundation’s first Annual General Meeting, being held separately at the Law Society from 6-6.30pm. For information about attending the AGM contact enquiries@atjf.org.uk.